

Theatro

There is something special about living in Theatro unique homes; they have the flexibility to enhance a contemporary urban lifestyle and are among the most popular resales, holding their value against other types of developments.

Theatro brings together sophisticated, contemporary living spaces have been created especially for those who need a seamless blend of architectural excellence and an urban lifestyle.

Theatro is aptly set on the site of the historic school of performing arts, founded in 1950 by Rose Bruford – a drama teacher and author who set up her own school because she thought she “could do better herself”. Like Union, she aimed to be the best, was known as a pioneer and a radical visionary.

The acquisition of the former site made way for Union to rise to the challenge to create another unique set of rules for urban living.
